allow time everyday for problems.

little more control of class noise.

lessen background material. ie. stuff not directly related to subject.

Good teacher as soon as one figure out what to listen $\frac{1}{2}$ study for.

Good Grading curve.

~~I have come~~ to the realization, early in the semester, that Dr. Ross is the finest math teacher that I have ever had.

Specifics - taking a large portion of a day to work problems is GREAT

- infrequent asides relating math concepts to art & reality were entertaining & appreciated.

Finally, I will be in Dr. Ross' section next Semester.

Very good for doing example in class to reinforce our understanding of text. Unfortunately, our class is always fall behind than other classes.

It is obvious that this teacher knows his material well, he has been helpful in trying to demonstrate the principles of calculus in a form that is understandable to the student. He has also been available for extra help when necessary, and all course work has been helpful in demonstrating these principles.

Prof. Ross is a good teacher in answering all questions related to his problems. Prof. Ross, however, sometimes get carried away and just goes on while we get confused. When he makes his errors, we get more confused. He should write his problems and relates them to what the students have trouble doing. Sometimes he just goes on, irrelevant to the problems we're capable of doing. Prof. Ross, though, teaches well overall, and he also has a fair way of grading. He also should set up meetings if other students are having problems.

The structure of the class was appropriate.

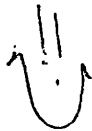

The homework was difficult at times. Could have more problems to work on.

The second test was too hard. Should have reviewed for it more.

Instructor was good. The last part of class (Volume, Area) was taught too fast. Got lost several times because too fast of a pace.

The class overall was alright

I had taken calculus in high school and still misunderstood aspects in Calc 205. Though felt knowledgeable about the subject.

Mr. Ross is always prepared for class. He presents the material very clearly. However, the material is very difficult to understand. The pace of the class is very fast... too fast. He should make sure the students understand the material somewhat before he goes on. I know that many of the students were confused. Otherwise, I feel that he is a good teacher that really cares about the students.

Mr. Ross is a very good instructor. When I first registered for this class I was prepared to get "lost" during the semester. But with Mr. Ross' teaching techniques I did not get "lost".

By putting examples of problems on the board while lecturing a new section of the book, I found it easier to understand new material. All of the examples he did really helped. Another thing that helped was taking a class period to go over homework problems we didn't understand. Also, the review sheets we were given before the exams were very helpful. His exams were also fair.

The lectures were easy to comprehend. He always stopped when the class was confused and tried to explain the problem more.

If I had to take another math class I would take it from Mr. Ross.

Mr. Ross is very helpful in trying to help us understand the various topics of this course. He is very excited about teaching the course and sometimes goes quite rapidly that we can't keep up. The days on which we work on problems are really good.

The text does have a number of examples but Mr. Ross gives us more which gives us a better idea of the topic that we covered.

strengths

- 1) goes over exam after handed back.
- 2) sets aside days for homework.

weakness

- 1) towards the end of the semester, he started to cram the material.

Please comment below on special strengths and weaknesses of the instructor and the instructor's conduct of the course. Constructive criticism is solicited.

1. Prof. Ross knows what he's talking about, definitely. He's very approachable and explains concepts very well.
2. Not enough homework problems were assigned and collected. If more problems were mandatory and collected, perhaps concepts would be a little more understood, by all.
3. Less time should have been spent going over homework problems in class. If people have problems with the homework, they should see the instructor during office hours.
4. exams were fair.

Prof. Ross is a pretty good teacher. I feel he is fair in his grading system. In his teaching method, I'd wish he'd go a little slower on some sections and maybe speak a little more in layman terms. I know this is a high level math class, but some stuff I just can't relate to.
