I like your style of lecture. I could understand the contents very well.

Some homework don't have answer in the textbook. I hope (especially even number) that will be very helpful if you provide the solutions and guesstions.

- I really like your teaching method its helping me understand calculus for the second time alot better but I would say to improve one one thing it would be better if you added exemples with definite numerical values after you do the proof with the variables

Special Strengths: Detailed and in-dept explanations. Professor clearly knows what he is talking about and expounds on examples, expanding w/ useful information.

Noticed good point, in cases where all work is not shown the professor verbally tells what steps he is taking but at sometimes, students may get lost. A little more work shown or explanation given may help.

For the most part, I think your teaching is good, albeit a little confusing at times, but I think that is more due to the course than anything else. However, I feel uncomfortable asking questions because you don't often ask the class if we have questions, and I feel like I'm weird for asking them. I do anyway because I don't care, but I think if we were given more opportunities to ask questions, it would be better.

Dr. Ross is a genius as far as I'm concerned. I'm not just saying that to suck up. His examples in class go into depth that at first seems too complex, but eventually work out to prove something simple that we thought we already "knew". His concept of proving equations instead of just believing them because "someone bigger told you it was so" is interesting and motivates students to learn. The grading seems fair, although I don't know exactly where I stand due to his mysterious amalgamation of grades. Perhaps a more straightforward grading system.
